

Jacobs Creek Watershed

Jacobs Creek originates in the Laurel Highlands of southwestern Pennsylvania. At its headwaters the creek is a cold water stream meandering across the top of the Chestnut Ridge. It plunges off the ridge and flows swiftly until it reaches the Bridgeport Dam where it becomes a warm water stream. The stream then meanders its way through the lowlands of the scenic Fayette - Westmoreland region. Tumbling over waterfalls and through rapids the stream enters the scenic Creek Hills area before reaching its confluence with the Youghiogheny River.
